

The business case for CIHT membership

The business case for CIHT membership has never been clearer. Membership empowers you and your team to share learnings and good operating practice, develop educational skill set and progress towards gaining professional qualifications. All this helps to advance the business case of operational efficiency & effectiveness across the whole of your organisation.

- With membership to CIHT, your staff can share learning and good operating practice, ensuring that knowledge gained at events, workshops and conferences can be shared and transferred across the team and the organisation as a whole.
- Allowing your staff to engage with the relevant professional development agenda, CPD training and technical information resources available ensures everyone can continue their professional development with relevant and up to date technical knowledge.

The Business Value of CIHT membership

- With CIHT membership, teams are able to perform at scale, are better aligned with sector and industry trends and are able to keep abreast of relevant changes to regulations and technical specifications.
- Technical papers, white papers, thought leadership reports and consultation responses are readily available to members. Members constantly network with each other through regional and national events as well as the Special Interest Groups.
- CIHT offers an end-to-end professional development solution with the professional review process, helping individuals work towards gaining CEng, IEng, EngTech, CTPP or TPP qualifications.

Driving global engagement across the transportation and highways sector

- With a membership in excess of 14,000 professionals across a wide cross section of the transportation and highways sector, CIHT has a growing global membership.
- From our base in the UK, with twelve individual regions, CIHT has a membership that stretches across the world from the USA and Canada to Malaysia, Hong Kong and the Middle East. From Australia and New Zealand to the Caribbean and all points in between.

Building on the past, driving towards the future

- CIHT is an effective, high performing institution that acts with impartiality that values diversity and supports all its members and regionals
- As a membership body, CIHT engages stakeholders, supports common interest and seeks to inform and influence decision makers. It is a progressive, ambitious and innovative institution that is committed to positive change.
- As a learned society, CIHT aims to support everyone in their professional journey within the Highways and Transportation sector.
- CIHT engages with stakeholders from across the sector, informing and influencing decision makers at regional, national and international level with content that resonates with key audiences.

Visit <https://www.ciht.org.uk/become-a-member/> for information about how to join